JUDGE BELIEVES IN PLAYGROUNDS

So He's Going to Have One Established Near His Court.

FOR GOOD AND BAD CHILDREN

Novel Reformatory Plan Suggested by Judge De Lacey, of the Juvenile Court.

Inestimable good has been done in Washington by playgrounds, according to Judge William De Lacey, of the Juvenile Court. So much impressed with the playgrounds idea is Judge De Lacey that he will within the next few weeks establish one in the rear of the court-house at 1816 F street northwest, and later change the entrance from F street to E street, where the playerounds be-

The Juvenile Court is located in the old Macfarland homestead, formerly the residence of Commissioner Henry B. F. Macfarland. In the rear of it is a spaclous lawn, around which there is a perfect bower of multi-colored hollyhocks, and the famous blood orange trumpet flower, of which the Southern poets have so often sung. In addition to these there are many locust trees, rose bushes, and other fragrant blos soms. The lawn is about 100 feet wid and 200 feet long. Tall grass covers the Ideal Site for Playgrounds.

This is considered by Judge De Lacey to be an ideal site for a playground. He has made arrangements with the play-grounds committee of the city to place number of swings, trapezes, horizontal bars, sand boxes, and other playground paraphernalia on the lawn as soon as possible. Within a short time the judge will have a driveway made of crushed blue stone run through the lawn from the E street entrance of the grounds to the rear of the building where the sessions of court are now held. When this is done the House of Detention van will have only a few rods to go from that institution to the court house. This will keep the little offenders out of the sight of the curious persons who crowd around the front door every Play Would Be Harmless.

"The children do a lot of harmless innocent things on the public playgrounds which would doubtless be called a nulsance if seen on the streets," said
the judge. "Horses and persons are
the judge. "Horses and persons are entertained in a manner to make the play 'kick the stick' on the streets the sharp stick is likely to strike somebody in the face and hurt them. There are any number of games played by the boys and girls which make the participants a nulsance when they are on the pavement and street, but are absolutely harmless and healthful when indulged in on the playgrounds. For that reason I say the playgrounds have done inestimable good for the younger element in Washington and the records kept by Chlef Probation Officer Copp show that there has been a marked and most nothere has been a marked and most no-ticeable decrease in crimes of the more serious nature, such as larceny, house-breaking, annoying persons, the destruc-tion of and depredation upon private property. I cannot too highly commend the playgrounds and their good work, and intend to establish one in the rear of the juvenile court in a short time."

Free for All Children.

Judge De Lacey stated that the playbe open to the children in the neighborhood except during the hours that the little men and women detained for an investigation of their cases were there. This will be about an hour or two each day, from 1 until 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon. With the exception of this brief period the grounds will be free and open for all the children who might wish to go there. This idea was first wish to go there. This idea was first suggested by Mrs. Dubois, wife of Senator Dubois, who is much interested in the welfare of Washington and the betterment of local conditions. As soon as the matter was brought to the attention of Judge De Lacey he appreciated that it was a capital idea and forthwith set about to have the large yard converted into a public playgrounds.

Miss Alice Copeland was disappointed not to have seen a female lobbyist. She thought they were out of town because Congress had adjourned.

But there was one thing that threw great gloom over the whole assemblage—for a moment. It was the announcement that the Hon. John Wesley Galnes, prize statesman and favorite with the

WEDS GIRL HE SAVED FROM DEATH IN LAKE

NAPLES, N. Y., July 16.-Katherine andaigua lake last winter broke through the ice where the water was 100 feet deep. Many witnessed the accident, but feared to aid the struggling woman. Just as she was collapsing, William Schultz risked his life to save her. He was the first link in the human chain that released her from her peril.

This brave act has been called to the attention of the Carnegie Hero Commission. Schultz has received one reward. Last night at the Presbyterian manse he married the girl he rescued.

J. W. Latham, marshal of Plain City, replied that Robinson was wealthy, but left his home at periodical intervals for "the road" preferring freights to passenger trains, and never paying fare, although his pockets might be full of money. Robinson lost a foot under the wheels on one of these excursions.

He refused to pay a fine for trespass, and was remanded to jail pending the investigation, which resulted in his immediate release.

"Philadelphia," said Miss Sallie Mc Farland, of Dalton, Ga., her manner preventing argument, "is a fine place. They told us it was sleepy and tiresome. Miss Hattie Hunter, of Johnson City Tenn., who is second to none in looks or conversational ability, remarked as follows:

"We are so sorry. He is so nice, so we have read."

And thus they chattered on, apparently untouched by weariness in spite of the fact that they have been going to bed at 2 a. m. and getting up at 6 in the morning every day since the trip started. Incontestably it was beyond the power of weariness to take the bloom off these Southern beauties.

"It's a disgrace the way this thing has been going on," declared Judge Fraser, referring to the interviews with counsel. His severity in dealing with the leading members of the Allegheny county bar was pronounced by other attorneys who were present to be unrecedented. With no sparing hand he criticised the conduct of the attorneys and finally saying that he supposed he had said enough, he adjourned the case un'il tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock in order to give counsel for Mrs. Hartje time to examine the disputed letters. Mrs. Mary Hartje was not present in the court room this morning, showing that her attorneys had anticipated the postponement, Augustus Hartje, the mil lionaire libellant, however, was there, as was "Tom" Madine, the coachman morning that one of the mysterious "short waist girls" in court Friday was "the other Mary." who, it is said, will be brought forward as the girl who telephoned to Madine while he was working at Schulenberg's livery stable.
